Ford President Iacocca Is Fired

DETROIT, July 14 (AP) — Ford Motor Co. President Lee lacocca has been fired, little more than a year after his 32-year rise through the ranks of the world's second biggest automaker was derailed in a corporate shakeup. Ford's board of directors voted unanimously yesterday to remove Mr. lacocca from the presidency of the auto company, said William Clay Ford, one of the firm's top executives and brother of board chairman Henry Ford II,

Boeing Sells 30 Planes for $1.2 Billion

the competing new, smaller version of the European Airbus, placed the largest order in commercial airline history today of $1.2 hillion for 30 Boeing wide-bodied 767s.

United President Richard Ferris said the order for the Boeings is the first step in revitalizing the airline's aging fleet of 350 planes and will initiate a new U.S. commerical jet

The decision was an economic coup for the Northwest and a disappointment for foreign competi-

"Exhaustive technical and economic analysis over the past year proves that the 767, which incorporates the latest aviation technology, is the best new aircraft for United." said Mr. Ferris in announcing the board of directors' decision.

The plane will be the first new one hy a U.S. manufacturer in a decade.

Besides purchasing the 767s, not yet off the drawing board, Mr. Ferris said the company will order 30 additional 727-200s, bringing the total package to $1.6 billion With spare parts and support equipment each 767 will cost about $40 million.

The Boeing 767 seats 197 passengers and fills a gap hetween smaller, narrow-bodied aircraft and the wide-bodies. A new, smaller version of the Airbus being planned by the European consorti-um was the main competition for the UAL order. The consortium had just given the go-ahead for construction of the new Airbus.

But Mr. Ferris said operational and fuel efficiency qualities of the Boeing 767 outweighed those of the Airhus A300-B10X.

"This decision was made on the merits of the aircraft in meeting United's Inture needs and not on the basis of national source," Mr. Ferris said. "Yet, we are pleased that United's order will help maintain commercial aircraft as the country's No. 1 industrial export."

MOSCOW, July 14 (UPI) - Jewish activist Anatoli Shcharansky was sentenced to 13 years in prison today on charges of high treason for allegedly spying for the United States. He defiantly proclaimed his devotion to the cause of "the liber-ation of Russian Jews."

WASHINGTON, July 14 (NYT) - Almost since taking office a year and a half ago. President Carter has seemed perplexed in his hunt for the right formula for dealing with the Soviet Union. He has tried bold initiatives, harsh public language, private compromises, quiet diplomacy and lures of summitry - but success still eludes him.

Initial reports said that seven guerrillas were wounded in the Tyre clashes. One of his most persistent probhas been to retain the benefits of detente and yet find strong enough relations or jeopardizing the talks detente and yet find strong enough countermeasures to show the Russians his toughness, when they are undeterred by his public protests against Soviet policy and ignore his ringing declarations that he will not on a new treaty on strategic arms.

To the acknowledged frustration of the White House, the president has been unable to restrain or turn back the Soviet-Cuban intervention in Africa or to prevent the treason trial of Anatoli Shcharansky. Now, officials suggest, he feels compelled to retaliate forcefully to recoup prestige and counteract an image of weakness.

The fundamental problem, critand a few administration officials agree privately — is that be has never succeeded in developing a real hargaining, give-and-take rela-tionship with Leonid Brezhnev and his Politburo colleagues. Under Presidents Nixon and Ford, their secretary of state, Henry Kissinger, used the lure of trade, technology, arms agreements and a hroad relationship to try to induce Moscow to pursue policies more to Washington's liking and to try to dissuade it from policies that led to public confrontation. This strategy had notable failures, but it worked rather well at times.

"Carter doesn't bave that kind of leverage with the Russians short of breaking off the arms talks," an of-ficial who works on Soviet affairs commented, "because there hasn't been enough give and take with Moscow since he took office. You need both a carrot and a stick, and he hasn't shown them a carrot, other than SALT."

Such crities point to the contrast between the trial of Mr. Shcharansky, in the face of Mr. Carter's protests, and the treatment of Alexan-der Solzhenitsyn in February, 1973. Mr. Solzhenitsyn, also charged with treason, did not undergo trial and was exiled to the West.

'Not Much to Lose'

"The Soviets didn't feel any more kindly toward Solzhenitsyn than they do toward Sheharansky," commented Sen. Charles Mathias, R-Md., "but they didn't want to disrupt the climate. They had a stake in an orderly world society in which each side has a decent respect for the other. They haven't got all that much to lose today in trying Shcharansky. In the present climate they don't feel those restraints on their behavior because of their relationship with us."

During the early 1970s, one of the principal inducements for Moscow to increase Jewish emigration was the prospect of improved trade status, increased access to U.S. technology and the possibility of large U.S. investments in Siberian oil fields. The most expansive

The Vance Reprimand: Young Also Won Some Praise

While Zbigniew Brzezinski, the

Shortly after Mr. Young's widely discussed interview with the French socialist daily newspaper Le Maun appeared in Paris, U.S. Embassy officials were summoned to the French Foreign Ministry for an explanation.

DAR ES SALAAM. Combined Offensive

The agreement has brought closely together the five major Western powers and five front-line African states, including the two Marxist ones in Angola and Mozambique, in a combined diplomatic offensive that has finally borne fruit.

The five African states, which meet under the chairmanship of Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere, played a crucial role in pressuring the Southwest African People's Organization (SWAPO) into finally accepting the Western plan despite SWAPO's strong objections to several key provisions. SWAPO is reported to have accepted a formula under which the five Western powers and the UN Security Council are to recognize Walvis Bay as as an integral part of Namibia despite the South African claim to it. The issue would be left to later negotiations between South Africa and an independent Namibian government.

South Africa has been ruling the mineral-rich but sparsely inhabited former German colony since the end of World War I under an old League of Nations mandate. But in 1966, the United Nations ceased to recognize this mandate and began demanding that South Africa give the territory its independence.

Talks Halted

After more than a year of periodic negotiations, South Africa gave its agreement to the Western plan in late April, but the Namibian nauonalist organization hroke off talks with the five Western powers after a May 5 South African raid on one of their refugee and guerril-ia camps in southern Angola, killing about 800 persons. SWAPO then began hardening its demands. But a summit of the five front-line African states in Luanda in early June broke the im-passe and led to their decision to force Swapo into to accept the Western peace plan without prior sausfaction of its demands.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 14 (NYT) — The United Nations intends to send an international military force of at least 5,000 men to Namibia to assist in ending the guerrilla war and bringing the terri-

The volume of trade rose, nonetheless, and now President Carter is considering the denial of U.S. technology - especially advanced computers and so-phisticated oil-drilling equipment - as a reprisal.

So far the only step he has taken has been to cancel some U.S. delegations to Moscow, including a prestigious scientific group much desired by the Russians. However, some administration officials consider that to be only token action with little deterrent effect. The imposition of economic sanctions would be much more serious.

New Data Link Informant For FBI to Racial Killing

By Howell Raines

BIRMINGHAM, Ala, July 14 (NYT) - Police sources here said vesterday that they had informaion that might support Gary Rowe
Jr.'s contention that he killed a hlack man during racial unrest in Birmingham in 1963, while Mr. Rowe was on the FBI's payroli as an informer within the Ku Klux

The sources said that a former Klansman and another man de-scribed as a Klan sympathizer had told the police, in separate accounts, that Mr. Rowe had boasted to them that "I shot some niggers" during rioting that fol-lowed a double bombing in a hlack neighborhood.

A Birmingham police officer has also told city investigators that be saw Mr. Rowe with a pistol stuck in his belt near a police barricade like the one described by Mr. Rowe in his account of the killing.

The investigators are now combing police files here for a missing report that they believe contains information about nt least three unsolved shootings during the 1963 disturbances.

New Document

Meanwhile, another document has come to light that may add to the controversy over Mr. Rowe's involvement in racial violence while a paid FBI informer. In a statement to a Senate investigator in 1975, Mr. Rowe accused John Doar, former assistant attorney general for civil rights, of forcing him to change his account of the killing of Viola Liuzzo in 1965. In the interview, Mr. Rowe said that federal investigators ignored his report that a black man was also killed in Mrs. Liuzzo's car when Mr. Rowe and three Birmingham Klansmen chased down the Detroit woman's automobile on the night after she took part in a civil 22 hlacks were shot and one killed rights march from Selma to Mont- on the night of Sept. 4. However,

Mr. Rowe further alleged that Mr. Doar had ordered him to keep silent when Mr. Rowe told government prosecutors that he could not positively identify a hlack man called as a key government witness as having been in the car with Mrs.

Liuzzo at the time of the shooting. Mr. Doar, contacted at his law office in New York, refused to discuss Mr. Rowe's allegations, saying that a Justice Department inquiry into Mr. Rowe's activities was the proper forum for such questions.

The Liuzzo case hrought national attention to Mr. Rowe as the FBI's chief informer against the Klan in Alabama. He was later relocated and given a new identity hy the bureau.

Suspect in Bombing

When the authorities in Alabama reopened their investigations into unsolved racial killings of the early 1960s, they contacted Mr. Rowe for information on the 1963 bombing that killed four black children at Sixteenth Street Baptist Church. But Mr. Rowe himself became a suspect in that case after two liedetector tests showed that he was giving "deceptive" answers when he denied having been with the group that planted the bomh.

Since that time there have been disclosures that indicate that Mr. Rowe may have participated in and helped to plan the Klan violence he was hired to observe.

A former leader of the Ku Klux dress."

In the same series of interviews, Mr. Rowe was quoted as saying that he had killed a black man during a riot here and was told by the FBI agent to whom he regularly reported to keep quiet about the shooting. The agent named by Mr. Rowe has denied the report.

Backed by 'The Man'

According to the Senate docu-ment that came to light yesterday, Mr. Rowe said that he was assured by FBI agents here that his partici-pation in violence had the personal endorsement of "the man" — the late J. Edgar Hoover, then director of the hureau. Mr. Rowe stated that "the quote to me was. The man has declared war on the Ku Klux Klan and that you are man enough

The police inquiry here now is focusing on Mr. Rowe's activities after bombings on the nights of May 11 and Sept. 4, 1963. Rioting of the sort described by Mr. Rowe took place on both nights. By his accounts and those of others, according to invesogative documents, the informant was in the riot area on both occasions.

Official police reports show that on the night of Sept. 4. However, an investigator here said that there is "a good possibility" that as many as 50 blacks were shot and several killed in incidents not officially re-

Presley Offer to FBI

WASHINGTON, July 14 (UPI) - An FBI memo shows that Elvis Presley once volunteered his services as an informant and wanted to meet Mr. Hoover, who he described as "the greatest living American," it was reported today.

The Washington Post said that the internal FB1 memo, released yesterday under the Freedom of Information Act, said that Mr. Presley also thought the "filthy and unkempt appearances and sugges-tive music" of the Beatles were responsible for many of the problems the United States was having with young people.

The memo was written by M.A. Jones, chief of research in the FBI's crime records division, to Assistant FBI Director Thomas Bishop after Mr. Presley visited FBI headquarters in December, 1970.

Mr. Presley expressed a wish to meet Mr. Hoover, hut Mr. Jones wrote: "Presley's sincerity and good intentions notwithstanding, he is certainly not the type of individual whom the director would wish to meet. ACLU, Press Groups Testify

U.S. Curb Sought on Property Searches

By Deirdre Carmody

WASHINGTON, July 14 (NYT)

- The American Civil Liberties Union and three press groups rep-resenting virtually all the daily newspapers in the United States asked Congress vesterday to enact legislation to protect citizens who are not suspected of a crime from unannounced police searches.

The ACLU and the news groups appeared before the Senate sub committee on the Constitution. The committee is holding bearings on proposed legislation that would offset effects of the recent Supreme Court decision authorizing searches of news offices and homes and of-fices of citizens believed to be in possession of material relevant to the investigation of a crime, even if they are not suspected of them-selves having committed any crime.

The press groups that testified yesterday were the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the American Newspaper Publishers Association and the Reporters Committee for Freedom of the

Carter Group Told to Repay Illegal '76 Gifts

WASHINGTON, July 14 (UPI)

The Federal Election Commission yesterday ordered President Carter's 1976 campaign committee to repay an illegal campaign contri-hution of more than $3,000 and fined Seagram's liquor beir Edgar Bronfman and a Coca-Cola politi-cal group $500 each.

Auto magnate Henry Ford, the third contributor to an expensive luncheon that the FEC ruled was an illegal contribution, was not fined because he took steps to reclaim his money before the investigation began.

The FEC said there was no evidence that the Carter campaign or the three contributors acted intentionally to violate the law.

The matter involved a luncheon Mr. Ford, Mr. Bronfman and Coke's political action committee gave for Mr. Carter at a New York restaurant shortly after he received the Democratic nomination for president in July, 1976. The FEC ruled that the luncheon for husinessmen to meet Mr. Carter constituted an illegal contribution.

2 Marines Get Court-Martial in Band Protest

NEW ORLEANS, July 14 (AP) Two members of a Marine Corps drum-and-hugle band have been court-martialed, and 23 other hand members face charges, for refusing to play at a Flag Day ceremony last monib.

Several band members used the June 14 ceremony in the French Quarter to air their disagreements with the hand director, Gunnery Sgt. R.E. Beauparlant. The band members, who disagreed with their leader's choice of music and the way he works, stood silently and refused to follow his order to play during the ceremony.

Two unidentified Marines received a summary court-martial, the least serious of three types of courts-martial, said Maj. Tom Hayden, a Marine Corps spokesman. Sentences for the two were not

Youngspeak and Carterspeak

First, let's take the case of Andrew Young. a useful public servant who, once again, has used the special license of the president's personal regard for him to emharrass his chief. Ambassador Young chose the moment when the U.S. government was trying to influence the Kremlin's treatment of several dissidents to declare that there are "hundreds, maybe even thousands of people I would call politi-cal prisoners in U.S. jails." A more effective way to undercut the president's concern could scarcely have been imagined. As usual, Mr. Young later elaborated. But hy failing to bring out the basic point that, in stark contrast to the Soviet Union, the United States has a legal and political system intended to protect against such overreachings hy the state - or at least to remedy them if they occur - he compounded the original offense.

It is probably vain to expect Mr. Young to impose the normal self-discipline expected of public officials. He will no doubt continue to call his own seriousness into question, to make his nominal superior (the secretary of state) look foolish, and to cheat the president of the respect a subordinate owes the chief executive - as long as Mr. Carter allows him to go on playing teacher's pet. Impeachment is not the remedy. Discipline is.

Our deeper complaint, however, is about Jimmy Carter. On Wednesday, Mr. Carter made his own statement about the trials of Anatoli Shcharansky and Alexander Ginshurg. Keep in mind that part of the Soviet campaign against these men has turned on a determination to deter Jimmy Carter's interventions in the Soviet dissident scene hy punishing the people be means to help. Keep in mind too, that U.S. diplomats had been quietly conveying to Moscow that to limit the damage to Soviet-U.S. relations it would be best to steer the trials away from Mr. Carter personally. So right in the middle of the trials Mr. Carter makes a fresh public intervention for Mr. Shcharansky and Mr. Ginshurg, repeating his denial that Mr. Shcharanksy (accused of CIA connections) had CIA connections and condemning anew the process of the trials.

No doubt Mr. Carter feels compassion for the defendants - what decent people do not? Perhaps he also feels that his direct challenge to the Russians on human rights makes him in some indirect way responsible for the example the Russians seem to be making of these particular defendants. Nor would it be surprising if he were of a mind to preempt charges from the right of insufficient ardor in the cause. Yet, considerations like these may not fully explain the obsessed and crusading quality of his latest remarks, and certainly they do not justify the timing.

It is not merely that Mr. Carter does not discipline his amhassador to the United Nations. He does not discipline himself. He conveys the impression that his noble purpose relieves him of worrying about the effects of what be says. This raises anxieties that extend beyond the trials and convictions. Nations cannot address each other as though only the matter of personal sincerity were at stake. The personal words of leaders inevitably carry heavy political freight. How is it possible that this ancient truism is not self-evident to Mr. Carter a year and a half into his presidency?

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Cloudy at the Summit

The task facing the Western leaders assembling in Bonn this weekend has not changed much over the last 18 months, though the agenda has broadened. Essentially, the question is how to get West Germany and Japan. but especially West Germany, to expand their economies and to reduce their huge trade surpluses so as to assure healthy growth to the entire industrial community. Unwilling to jeopardize the low inflation rate on which he has staked his political future, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt insists that West German growth requires more exports more exports require a stronger dollar - a stronger dollar requires a halanced U.S. trade - and such balance requires the United States to reduce its imports of oil. Heal theyself, he kept telling us.

Seeking a path away from this impasse, the British proposed a package deal. Would West Germany and Japan cut taxes and increase government spending if (1) the other industrial democracies also stimulate their economies enough to generate exports for all; (2) the United States shores up the dollar hy selling foreign currencies and gold, when necessary, and curhs oil imports while maintaining its growth; (3) Britian, France and Japan agree to reverse their protectionist trends and help reach a liberal new world trade agreement, and (4) everyone, hut especially Japan, moves to enhance the huying power of the developing nations?

Mr. Schmidt replied, yes, hut. Since West Germany and the other Common Market nations each do about half to two-thirds of their husiness with each other, he asked for more than reassurances on the dollar and general growth. He would agree, but only if European currencies were stablilized as well. Toward that end, be joined with the French in proposing a gradual linking of Common Market currencies, starting next door, to "float" them together against the dollar, A $50-billion reserve fund and new European institutions would hack up the effort. If it succeeds, a large new step would have heen taken toward the dream of a common currency and full economic integration.

But to succeed, wealth would have to shift from the richer parts of the continent to the poorer. The European economies would have to harmonize their inflation and growth rates - at higher levels of growth and employment than West Germany has up to now favored. So, for new reasons, expansion in West Germany remains central.

Is this grander prize of collaboration attainable at the summit? Mr. Schmidt will not say when he would cut taxes, or hy how much, until he hears the commitments of Britain, France and Japan on trade and of the United States on energy. President Carter will promise to do his best to get congress to enact a program to reduce oil imports, although he claims progress without it. He may also vow to impose import quotas to raise the price of oil if a less clumsy formula is not enacted, but he is unlikely to say when, and that may lead the allies to keep their pledges vague as well. And no one can guarantee that summit promises will be carried out vigorously enough to achieve their purpose. Still, West German pledges to stimulate growth are the things to look for. If they are made, other things can begin to happen.

Spoiled Ballots

The people of Bolivia, a country that has experienced 170 coups in 150 years, last elected a president in 1966. A few days ago they finally voted to choose a successor to President Hugo Banzer. But the authorities will not accept the choice. Although the results are still incomplete, opposition charges of gross fraud seem to be justified.

The opposition will have some representation in the newly elected congress - an improvement over the present situation. And Bolivia's buman rights climate has undeniably improved in recent months, thanks mainly to pressure from the United States. But the electoral fraud is most disappointing. The Carter administration attached great importance to this election being held honestly and on schedule, viewing it as a step toward the recovery of democracy in South America. Having made an issue of an honest election, it can only deplore a dishonest one. THE NEW YORK TIMES.

International Opinion

Bonn and the West

It has long been and still is an obvious element of Soviet policy to try and pry West Germany away from the Western alliance. Equally, there are few people in Bonn, even in high places, who are attracted by the idea of a "socialist" Bonn as an alternative to one involving the "capitalist" United States. But ideas of this kind have little chance of gaining ground while the present West German government is in power. After all, if Bonn's policy were to become based on mistrust of the United States, this would soon lead to mistrust of Bonn by the United States - and by other countries as well. And French support for West German criticism of Washington would soon evaporate if a West German-Soviet rapprochement began to take shape.

What are human rights anyway?

One of our most cherished documents defined them admirably -"life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." Later, the Bill of Rights specified such freedoms as those of speech and religion. And still another generation added that guarantee of "due process of law" without which rights become empty to guarantee them; instead, due process was mocked in the socalled trials of Shcharansky and Ginshurg. As a result, not even the barred doors of the courtrooms could hide the hypocrisy, cruelty and fear of the Soviet system from the eyes of the world.

Soviet officials are bound to know that such a spectacle will make it more difficult for Congress, owing to U.S. revulsion, to ratify a sensible SALT agreement or take any other step to improve Soviet-U.S. relations. Moscow also must know it is risking serious material losses — for example, cancellation of the planned export of computer and oil drilling equipment from this country to the Soviet Union. Since President Carter has publicly denied Sovies allegations that Shcharansky was a spy for the CIA, and personally appealed for the treason charge against him to he dropped, his trial on precisely that charge was an almost calculated affront to Carter.

U.S. Foreign Policy: Uncertainty Reigns By David S. Broder

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON — A most decision. The inhibitions are weak. V disquieting description of the way in which foreign policy is made in the Carter administration was given last week, not by one of the president's external critics, but by a Carter political appointee whose work gives him first-hand knowledge of the process.

The official in quesion was talking to a group of reporters under ground rules that prevent any of us from using his name. He was asked a question about the instructions Secretary of State Cyrus Vance had been given for his Geneva meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister An-drei Gromyko on the strategio-arms

"We don't know," be said. That was surprising, because the discus-sion was taking place at midday last Monday and Vance was scheduled to leave early the oext morning for talks on the most important issue in U.S.-Soviet relations.

result in U.S.-Soviet relations:

The explanation, the official said, was that the president's special coordination committee on arms control, a part of the National Security Council apparatus, had met the previous week (without the previous week (without the president who was acceptant at president, who was vacationing at Camp David) and had sent him alternative policy options. But the papers had not reached the presi-dent until the weekend, and on Monday his reply was still being

Unique

While the specific circumstances of this situation were unique, the official said, there were four general characteristics of the Carter presidency that made it anything but unusual for senior officers to be unaware, on the eve of major nego-tiations, of what the president wanted done.

• First, unlike most of his predecessors, back to Harry Truman, Carter has not clearly designant. nated a single center for foreign policy decision-making outside the Oval Office. There is no one with authority approaching that ex-ercised in the past by a George Marshall, a Dean Acheson, a John Foster Dulles or a Henry Kissinger.

Rather, anthority has been divided among Vance, national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski and Secretary of Defense Harold Brown, with Ambassador to the UN Andrew Young arms control negotiator Paul Warnke, trade negotiator Robert Strauss and Secretary of the Treasury Michael Blumenthal having a major voice on some of the international issues as Vance has been asserting himself lately, this official said, but he has not been able 10 pull together the authority that Carter deliberately subdivided.

 Second, Carter's approach to decision-making has tended to mhibit these officials from doing much politicking among themselves to build support for a particular ening, the official said approvingly, but for most of its 18 months in office, the administration's senior foreign policy officials have been reluctant to lobby each other, or to use the techniques of backson. use the techniques of backscratching and persuasion needed to push the president in a particular policy direction. The Carter administration has been as nonpolitical internally as it has in its external dealings with Congress, the interest groups and other extenal power.

• Third, there has been a similar inhibition on carrying any internai arguments to the point of bureaucratic bloodletting the official said. There are as many policy disagreements within this administration as is normal, but Carter inhibits full-scale personal or bureau-cratic war. The advantage is that there is less personal venom inside the Carter administration than

But on the other hand, he said, since oo one ever feels the deep cuts of defeat in the battle for the president's mind, there is never any real certainty among those who prevail about how final any particular policy victory may prove to be.

Fourth and finally, this official said, Carter, unlike most other politicians, feels no great need to "harmonize" all his policy ideas and puts no great stock in consistency. Rather, he is quite comfortable in holding simultaneously to strongly conflicting notions and in allowing others to see that he changes his mind about which ideas to make predominant at any given moment

This is, the official said, linked to Carter's habit of looking oo foreign policy, not from the perspective of diplomat seeking to mediate intractable and long-term interna-tional rivalries, but rather from the viewpoint of an engineer seeking through experiment to find the right solution which will dispose of the problem.

A Scramble

As a result of this rather unusual way of making policy, Carter fre-quently leaves even his most senior advisors uncertain until the last moment where he is going to come down oo a question. Not surpris-ingly, the official added, when the word does come down from the president, there is often a last-min-ute scramble to adjust plans to his command, or to persuade him to alter the just-completed decision.

There has been abundant evidence available to reporters and other outsiders of Carter's handling, major domestic issues—from energy policy to urban policy—in this fashion. To hear, from the lips of one of his own foreign policy officials. one of his own foreign policy offinational issues are handled in much the same way is, to put it mildly, unsettling.

Bridging the Nuclear Rift

By Enrico Jacchia

having to face the aftermath of at least one serious quarrel with the European allies. A dangerous rift had developed between the United States and Europe oo nuclear ex-port policy. For the foreseeable future, that is for about a couple of years, the first has been bridged. The merit of the settlement is attributed to President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's initiative at the NATO summit in Washington in May, with a conspicious display of Washington acquiescence.

The formula suggested by the French president was undoubtedly ingenious. It held firm to the original French stand. But it offered a way out of the impasse with almost total satisfaction for European needs and pride, and with such a little loss of face for the U.S. administration that it becomes apparent only to specialists.

Concern

Here's how things developed: When the U.S. legislation to curb nuclear proliferation was enacted at the beginning of last spring, most governments expressed concern at one of the fundamental provisions of the new act: the threat of a cutoff of nuclear supplies to countries which would refuse to discuss with Washington the amendments necessary to bring existing international agreements into line with the provisions of the U.S.

Al their April Copenhagen summit, the European heads of state decided to meet the U.S. move with a contemptuous silence. However, some European leaders were more open to compromise than others. Let's begin talking to the Americans, they suggested: That is all they ask for in return for resuming supply of the nuclear fuel we oeed. But to renegotiate under pressure an agreement valid for another 20 years or more was ultimately con-sidered an indignity. On one point the French were adamant: The Americans have promoted INFCE (The International Nuclear Fuel Study), they can't expect negotia-tions to be opened on practically the same subject before that exercise is terminated.

Different Course

On May 2, the pressure began to be felt. The Dutch were told that the supply of highly enriched urani-um for the research center at Petten would be cut off unless negotiations were opened. The move was a

Yet New Delhi requests that the 1963 agreement, un-der which the United States has undertaken to supply fuel for the two reactors at Tarapur, continues to be honored without allowing international inspectors to verify the peaceful use of the material supplied.

President Carter has ehosen to authorize the shipment — subject for congressional approval — in the hope of ohtaining future committments from the Indians. Many people argue that the president's gamble is defensible. But are the Europeans governments less trustworthy than the Indians? The way had been opened for a compromise with the European Community members. Brilliant

The formula elaborated by the Quai d'Orsay is brilliant. After all, if the Americans are so eager to open discussions, let's do it. Provided we discuss almost oothing.

Because this is the beauty of it. In return for the opening of talks the Carter administration will promptly lift the embargo on oucle-

Bikini Island Evacuation

WASHINGTON, July 14 (UPI) The 142 residents of Bikini Island will board three U.S. ships next month and leave the small atoll, whose soil is still contaminated from H-bomb tests 24 years ago.

"They will return to a temporary village of plywood structures on concrete in Kili Island until we determine a final resettlement site for the group," John DeYoung, an Interior Department official, said. Kili Island, about 700 miles from Bikini, is the home of 400 persons who were removed from Bikini in the first evacuation and who have not yet returned. Mr. DeYoung said that the transfer will cost about $500,000.

The major change made in the bill on the floor yesterday was a move by Education and Labor Committee Chairman Rep. Carl Perkins, D.Ky., to cut by about $215 million increases in the bill's impact-aid programs.

Tax-Exempt Installations

The idea of impact aid is to offset the burden placed on local school districts by government employees who work at tax-exempt federal installations. The aid is compensation for the fact that the workers' families consume local services but their employer doesn't pay the taxes that usually support such services.

Rep. Perkins said that the cuts were made to ward off a presiden-tial veto and that the figure amounted to a "compromise" with the administration. The administration had wanted to cut impact aid by about $76 million. But the committee ignored its public housing. The cut eliminated a committee provision that would have allowed children whose parents work on a federal installation but live in another state to be counted for impact aid. And it reduced the nount of money available for children whose parents work on a fed-eral installation but live in a different county. Recent presidents all have tried to cut impact aid, which has grown from $29 million in fiscal 1951 to $770 million in fiscal year 1978.

The other change in the bill is one the committee made in the formula for distributing compensatory-education moncy. The result will be that big cities will get a larger share of the $6.3 billion authorized for compensatory education for fis-

Art Editor Thomas Hess, Champion of U.S. Works

NEW YORK, July 14 (NYT) — Thomas B. Hess, 57, consultative chairman of the Department of 20th-Century Art at the Metropolitan Museum and for many years editor of Art News magazine, died yesterday after a heart attack.

Mr. Hess was an active champion of U.S. painting and sculpture of the period since World War II and maintained long allegiances — above all to Barnett Newman and Willem De Kooning, the abstract expressionists — that he formed in the 1940s. But he retained an openness to new ideas. As editor, as a freelance author and as the organizer of exhibitions that toured suc-cessfully in the United States and Europe, Mr. Hess was a major figure in U.S. cultural life.

In February, Mr. Hess took over from Henry Geldzahler in the Department of 20th-Century Art and had planned to form a great modern collection and had proposed a number of major exhibitions.

Mr. Hess was born in Rye, N.Y., on July 14, 1920. He went to school in the United States and in Switzerland before going to Yale, where he was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and graduated magna cum laude in 1942. His specialty was the art, lit-erature and history of France in the 17th century.

As an editor, Mr. Hess was as much at home in Rome, Paris and London as he was in New York. From 1967 to 1972, he was New York correspondent for Le Monde. Hc. encouraged poets like John Ashbery and Frank O'Hara to write on art, and he also published the satirical drawings with which Ad Reinhardt took the New York art world to pieces.

Home-Groan, Home-Grown Drama

ONDON. July 14 (IHT) - As if to emphasize that English drama remains irredeemably, not 10 say miserahly, domestic in its "A Family" has opened at the Theaire Royal. Haymarket, the latest progeny of a long line of decent, respectable, unambiuous, slightly dull forebears, better cast than many of its predecessors but unmistakably from the same mold.

Here, once again, is the family as a minor disaster area. Harwood's clan is afflicted by guilt, riven by repressed hatreds, inward-looking. locked in a baille between father and son in which the son, although unable to win, belps a representative of the succeeding generation to victory, which is defined as escape from the confines of the bome. Harry Andrews' massive presence fills out the role of the father.

And Paul Scofield brings his great authority to bear on the character of Freddie. It is a controlled performance, one well within his capabilities, but he imparts to it a strength and a wry humor. It is precisely these qualities that make il difficult to accept him as the in-complete figure of the play, someone who has allowed most of his life to pass in a dream of longing for what-might-have-been.

But the inconsistency, more noticeable as the drama grows more emotional in the second act, is in the writing. In the same way, it is difficult to believe that the solution to Paula's problems - that she should live on her own - should not occur to anyone else in the family, or that she, full of self-knowledge, should be so weak.

Harwood's novelty lies in his relarion of the family saga, which is done in a series of flashhacks and simultaneous scenes so that the pass and the present gradually at least in this production, treat merge, a technique which adds a certain interest to a familiar tale.

Tut will arrive during winter, when attendance at the museum is normally heaviest, and the show will open when the staff is already expected to be coping with capacity crowds coming to see the newly opened Temple of Dendur, the latest Costume Institute show and the great Dresden exhibition. It is these thoughts that make museum staffers go pale. As applications continue to pour DARIS, July 14 (IHT) — In today's age of instant visual communication through photogra-phy, movies and television, interest is growing in delving into the beginnings of the captured image.

Of the many photography museums that have sprung up in the last few decades, one of the richest is to be found in Bievres (78 Rue de Paris), a dozen kilometers from Paris. Founded in 1962 by Jean Fage and his son, Andre, Le Musee Français de la Photographie bas more than 12,000 cameras, lenses and other photographic material, of which about 8,000 are on exhibit.

"Our biggess problem is lack of space to store and exhibit the mate-rial we have," Jean Fage complains. Everything is so cramped that the real value of the pieces we possess s almost lost in the way they are on top of each other."

The museum's three floors have just about every example of photographic equipment since the hirth of photography, and every room is filled from floor to ceiling.

Most of the pieces collected hy Mr. Fage have heen donated hy manufacturers of photographic equipment, by collectors or by individuals who did not know what to do with the equipment they discovered in their grandparents' attics.

dress treatment of the play.

In the beginning, the Fages were able to huy many things cheaply because nobody was really interested in old cameras. There have been more than 2,300 donations. The higgest lot came from Zeiss-Ikon in 1965. At that time the company was trading new cameras with cus-tomers for old equipment. "We knew about it, and when we heard that they were going to destroy the old cameras, we contacted them. At first they refused to have anything to do with us, but after much pleading and cooling our beels, the general manager finally agreed to give them to the museum," Mr.

The museum also owns a large collection of photographs, photo plates and daguerreotypes. Of the 450,000 total, Mr. Fage estimates that about 3,000 to 4,000 of them are of historical and artistic value. Among them are a considerable number by Daguerre, Nadar and two by Julia Margaret Cameron.

Mr. Fage is also the founder of an annual photo fair and market that specializes in the trading of old photographic equipment. Started more than 10 years ago, the market is the higgest event of its kind in the world. Collectors, traders and museum officials from many countries gather here, usually on the first Sunday of every June. Some very rare equipment is traded. Mr. Fage, 73, was horn in Hungary and came to France at the age of 17. At 20 he acquired his first camera and from then on could not live without one. "Now that this museum is established, I would like to have enough money and staff (only two people besides my son and I work here) to sort out all the documents and write down a com-

The Essential Outlook Of American Artists

Aris, Brussels, to Aug. 23.

Two anniversaries have brought a full house of art to the Palais des Beaux Arts. An exhibition of 20thcentury American paintings on loan from the New York Metropolttan Museum marks the 30th anniversary of the American Chamber of Commerce in Belgium and is sponsored by the Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., a founder member. Another, larger show, covering art in Belgium from 1880 to 1950, celehrates the 50th anniversary of the Society of Exhibitions of the Palais des Beaux Arts.

The American paintings, originally assembled for a loan show to the Parrish Museum in New York. have special interest because they offer an essentially American outlook and style, except for one or two artists, such as Josef Albers and Willem de Kooning, who are still close to their European origins.

Aspects of American life, painted in a straightforward, illustrative style through the twenties and thirties, with no him of the deliberate banality of today's hyperrealists, make pleasant, carefully composed paintings with anecdotal leanings. Kenneth Hayes Miller's group of gossiping women in a fitting room is close to a stage scene with its ani-mated central figures and saleswomen occaring out the doors in the world of Belgian art is demonstrated by the fact that 40 years ago the Haesaerts organized an exhibition at the Palais des Beaux Arts which included many artists then unknown or very young who reappear in this show with renown and repu-tations acquired in the interval.

A notable and surprising omis-sion is the group of Belgian abstract and constructivist artists of international class, Josef Peeters, Servranckx, De Boeck, Flouquet, Karel Maes, Baugniet, who might

The Eager Search for Substitutes for the Unobtainable Masters

By Souren Melikian

ONDON, July 14 (IHT) - The important sale of old masters held at Christie's last Friday, fol-lowing that of the Anthony Morris Clark collection the day before, was a test — if only for its size. For months there had not been such a large number of pictures - 140 on Friday - with important signatures or attributions. The test worked and highlighted some interesting developments in the market. Most striking among the new trends is the eager search for mas-ters that can serve as substitutes for the now unobtainable top-row artists. It is not enough to have the money to pay for a Rembrandt. The problem is to find it. Meanwhile, high-powered collectors, museum curators and top-notch inveslors — the latter buying with a view to reselling to the former - have to

The result last Friday was that a painter such as Jan Jansz van der Heyden suddenly found himself propelled to the front line. At £209,000, the view of an imaginary Dutch city with an interesting study of a pale northern sun playing on the brick facades and the cobbled street, multiplied threefold the previous record for the artist's

Van der Heyden is a Dutch master who at his best can achieve a poetical atmosphere through the perfect bandling of the most trifling details, with special attention given to light. At times one is reminded of Pieter de Hooch. When the effect sought is missed, however, this can result in relication. er, this can result in painstaking academism — to which Friday's picture came a bit too close, thus making the price truly exorbitant. Presumably, the good signature and date, 1676, and the long pedigree carried weight with the buyer
— although the finest pedigree will never be as good as clever painting. The story repeated itself with some varianons a number of times. Inexplicably, a landscape by Philips Acrtsz Koninck, this time unsigned, also shot through the roof. Koninck had a wonderful sense of composition, with sweeping landscapes such as in this picture, but it was unfortunately not always matched by total mastery at wielding the brush. At £132,000, a ures as miserable as the men rowrecord for the artist, the price was ing in a punt. At £176,000, it more than generous. more than generous.

Inevitably, a parallel trend to the desperate search for substitutes for the greatest artists is the tendency to overprice those lesser works of famous artists that are sliced in between handfuls of minor masters. Salomon Jacobsz van Ruysdael certainly did some of the most beautiful landscapes of European painting. Apparently, however, he was not beneath signing daubs. His "Wooded River Landscape" offered Friday was reminiscent of the famous Louvre masterpiece in composititon and stress on the reflec-tion of the sky in dark waters. But I cannot remember a tree so sketchily done as the dwarf-like willow that dominated the scene nor fig-

The third trend revealed last Friday might be characterized as "the bouquet craze." Flemish and Dutch still lifes representing flowers painted with a professional botanist's obsessive care for detail have always been in great demand. But on Friday, instead of just finding them decorative — which, they are buyers seemed to see them as a maior art form. A lovely composition by Jan van Huysum of roses, tulips, carnations and other flowers, rising from an urn on a stone ledge, could perhaps be argued to be an exceptionally good 17th-century decorative still life, but £165,000 seems a somewhat disproportionate price. The next Van Huysum still life, which was also good, made £17,600, which is just about what one expects.

Imitative

Things really got out of hand with Jan van Os, a Dutch flower painter who worked in the late 18th century, when Dutch painting had been reduced to a repetitive reflec-"Roses, Tulips, Carnations and Other Flowers in a Sculpted Urn on a Plinth," whose very title describes the imitative quality, soared to a dizzying £209,000, and another, dated 1774, to £242,000. A very fine "Madonna and Child With Saint John the Baptist," considered by Christie's expert to be the work of Jan Provost, made £33,000, and a delightful Flemish "Virgin and Child" of the late 15th century, Bruges school, failed to reach its reserve at £9,350. French paintings sold poorly throughout. An Italianate landscape signed by Hubert Robert in 1778 was cheap at £1.980, and a big religious scene by Pierre Hubert Subleyras was not unduly expensive at £6,600. Neither the latter nor the unsigned Flemish paintings of the late 15th and early 16th centuries, handicapped by their anonymity, qualify as arguable substitutes for the varishing Dutch and Flemisb masters of great fame.

Unquestionable identification continues to be the sine-qua-non condition for works to fare well in the art market.

Opening Pandora's Box of Questions

By Ada Louise Huxtable

ONDON (NYT) - "London, 1900," an exhibition of English turn-of-the-century building on view at the Heinz Gallery of the Royal Institute of British Architects on Portman Square through July and August, is London's architectural event of the summer season. Scheduled to tour internation-ally when it closes, the show in-cludes photographs, drawings from the RIBA collection, and at least one spectacular model, of Westminster Cathedral.

On the face, or facade of it, London buildings of the decades from 1890 to 1914, a period and an ocuvre that have been largely ignored, seem like an uncontroversial enough subject. The show is, in fact, an architectural historian's delight in terms of the intensity of its scholarship (Gavin Stamp is its or-ganizer and the author of its text). the quality of its photography (splendid pictures of both famous and little-known buildings have been taken by Andre Goulancourt) and its chauvinistic nostalgia at just the right remove (this is the architecture of the Edwardian Age and the Imperial City at its zenith).

The subject, with its outstanding documentation, comes at exactly the right moment to ride the current international wave of historical revisionism, and what may look like perverse or revolutionary vision at first glance is more accurately the predictable swing of time and taste, coupled with the rise of a curious and articulate generation that has no use for another generation's standards. But this show is one of the more solid exercises in cultural re-examination, and we are the richer for it.

Still, "London, 1900" turns out to be a surprisingly controversial subject after all. By the very act of displaying this mixed bag of exub-erant ecleculcism, so long out of favor, an absolute Pandora's Box of questions about what is good and what is bad architecture is opened, with all kinds of reputations furned inside out and upside down. Com-ing out for Tradition with a capital T still ranks as radical in some circles. Even the most skillful changing of styles like so many hats ran-kles those who continue to believe that there is at least some tacit moral liaison between appearance and structure, or use.

Contribution

Architectural Design, the English magazine which prides itself on its forward stance in the profession, has devoted a double issue to the exhibition, under the guest editorship of Gavin Stamp, which also serves as the catalog for the show. Reading Mr. Stamp's essay, there is no question about the contribution being made to architectural schol-

In fact, there should be no controversy about the sbow or the work at all, Mr. Stamp explains, except for those so steeped in the dogma" of modernism that they are unable to perceive the quality or value of a period and kind of practice that modernism rejected an age not only of monumental building and profligate eclecticism, but of symbolic image-making and a grand urban ideal.
Its leaders were in unashamed pursuit of classical nobility as well as of all kinds of interpretations of the architectural past, from Italianate to "Pont Street Dutch." Such establishment practitioners as Sir Edwin Lutyens, who denied modernism out of hand, are becoming the new cult figures, and names like Sir Aston Webb, E.A. Rickards, John Belcher and Reginald Blomfield, who dealt in everything from classical and baroque to fashionable mannerism and such specialties as "Champs-Elysees French," are commanding new respect. Mr. Stamp puts them just slightly higher in the pantheon of English archi- it now. Examples range from Sir tecture than the previously enshnned proto-modernists Norman Shaw W.R. Lethaby and Philip Webb, as men who understood what city-building was truly about.

There is no doubt but that these men built very, very well. As for style, the show clearly asks whether it was either possible or necessary to create a "new style" at the time. and whether style is not properly a slow, organic development of tradition and lessons from the past. It can be argued, of course, that this is a selective or partial definition.

Little Consistency

But what seems to be most disturning about the show to many people is that there is so little consistency in the work - in the sense that outstanding creative periods in the arts have produced strong aes-thetic typologies — a fact that has caused some discomfort and a bit of reluctance to swallow the show's thesis whole. Critical judgment will undoubtedly be hoist with the avant-garde's own perard of "pluralism," However, it is this inconsistency, and the lack of a unifying aesthetic ideal, in spite of the high quality of much of the work, that is the most serious argument for considering it a period of high competence rather than of

The amount of work involved is staggering. It was a time of extraor dinary building activity that pro-duced much of London as we know

Aston Webb's classical refacing of Buckingham Palace in 1912-13 and his creation of the Admiralty Arch for a formal processional axis to the Strand to the large-scale erection of new business palaces like Lloyd's Registry of Ships in the "arts and crafts haroque" of T.E. Colcutt of 1900-01, or Lutyens suave Georgian models.

In addition to great numbers of public and private buildings, there were the new museums, libraries and educational buildings, and commercial construction, including department stores and factories, as well as hotels, theaters and flats.

Visiting London with increasing admiration over the years, I have loved all of it. Those solid turn-ofthe-century structures with their confident, conservative images are a large part of the essential Lon-don, beyond the genius of Wren and Hawksmoor and the familiar Victorian monuments, heyond landmarks or cliches. In this sense, there is indeed a London "style" unrecorded in textbooks and guide books, but powerfully present on

World's Growth Slowing, Summit or No

By Hobart Rowen BONN, July 14 (WP) - Regardless of what happens at the economic summit here. one fact above all stands out: the world is facing a period of slow economic growth, if not actual recession. And this time, in contrast to the past, a weakened United States, plagued by an enormous trade deficit, is not likely to be the driving force behind the

The United States itself is entering a phase of growth under the 4-percent level perhaps closer to 3 percent — from now through 1979. And facing a double-digit inflation rate, President Carter has ben forced to rein in his plans for expansion. In Europe and Canada, an overall 3 percent growth rate would be an achievement. Taking the 24 industrial member countries of the Organization for Economie Cooperation and Development together, there are now 17 million unemployed, with beavy concentrations of joblessness among young persons everywhere.

Enormous Implications

All of this has enormous social and economie implications, for the less-developed as well as the industrial nations. Politicians everywhere recognize it as dynamite, but standard of measurement should look to only modest, or marginal, results. The problems are simply too big.

A brand-new study by Geoffrey Moore and Philip Klein of the National Bureau of Economic Research provides a clue to the scope of the difficulties. According to an index of "economic performance," only the United States and Britain among the seven nations represented here are doing better than their long-term trends.

Beyond GNP Data This index goes beyond the normal fig-ures for gross national product to take into account jobs, unemployment, income, and trade, all expressed in physical units or constant prices.

Both the United States, at 6 percent, and Britain, at 4 percent, are double their trend rates. But U.S. growth is slipping, and British officials, enjoying a temporary stimulus from North Sea oil, see declining performance beginning some time in 1979 unless West Germany is willing to take the lead in sparking a revisilization of Furne.

For the short run, the summit will not make much difference, although the right decisions will help rather than burt. Ironi-cally, at a time when the accepted rhetoric stresses the importance of international interdependence, the key decisions for the long run remain those made at a national level and in the national interest.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

CAB Tough on Airline Mergers

As the third U.S. airline merger possibility in about a month emerges, Civil Aeronautics Board chairman Alfred Kahn indicates that such plans may have difficulty in obtaining necessary CAB approv-al. Mr. Kahn's statement came as North Central Airways and Southern Airways announced they have reached an agreement in principle to merge. "The hurden of proof is on them (the airlines) and it will be damned difficult for them to convince me....They will have to be very persuasive." Mr. Kahn says. Earlier this week, Texas International Airlines announced that it had purchased 9.2 percent of the outstanding shares of National Airlines, and Continental Airlines and Western Airlines have disclosed that they had begun merger discussions. Commenting on the recent moves, Mr. Kahn said, "I am an old antitruster from way back." The latest bid involves the exchange of 2.2 shares of North Central common stock for each Southern share.

Texaco Confirms Traces Found

Texaco has discovered traces of hydrocarbons 15,000 feet down in the Atlantic Ocean 104 miles directly east of Atlantic City, N.J., a company official confirms. It is the first potential discovery of oil or gas in the Baltimore Canyon drilling that began three months ago. Richard Palmer, senior vice president of production for the company, said a series of tests will be conducted at the drilling site over the next two weeks to determine whether there are hydrocarbons in commercial quantities. The exploratory well, started April 16, is Texaco's only well in the canyon. Drilling is scheduled to go 3,000 feet deeper. The venture has six participants, of which Texaco has the largest interest, 31.5 percent. Other participants are Getty Oil, 20 percent; Sun Oil, 16 percent; Allied Chemical, 12.5 percent, and Transco Exploration and Freeport Minerals, each 10 percent.

Another problem is petroleum production at Bolivia's important fields near Santa Cruz. While production dropped 14.7 percent in 1977, internal consumption of re-fined petroleum jumped 17.1 percent - in part because Bolivia continues to sell gasoline at about 37 cents a gallon within the country.

Oil Exports Off

The result was that petroleum exports dropped by 44 percent in 1977 and export earning dropped by more than $40 million. While the state-owned petroleum company and three foreign firms bave discovered some new oilfields, the U.S. economic survey predicts that internal consumption will offset new production and that Bolivia's export earnings from pe-troleum will remain about the same this year as last. At the same time, the government's budget has been growing by about 20 percent a year for the past twn years. The hudget deficit in 1977 was $87 million, or 17 percent of the total budget. To help reduce its own deficit and slow down an inflation rate officially estimated at about 17 percent — unofficially, in-flatinn is estimated at about 30 percent a year - the government has ordered a 14-percent reduction in new capital investment by stateowned corporations and other measures to reduce their budgets by about 20 percent this year. The government's 1978 budget will be 19-percent greater than in 1977.

Meanwhile, Bolivia ran a current-account deficit last year of almost $170 million in addition to paying ballooning debt service payments of $177.4 million. In effect, Bolivia stayed afloat

No vote was taken on the rise, but the only other country which objected was Bolivia — although it did so for completely different reasons from the United States. Dele-gates said the Bolivians argue that the increase was not hig enough.

No other tin-producing country is as dependent on the metal as Bolivia, the world's second-biggest producer after Malaysia. The meta accounts for about half of Bolivia's foreign-exchange earnings hut pro-duction costs there are the highest in the world.

The new intervention range set a "floor" price of 1,350 ringgits per picul (about $9,600 per ton) and n "ceiling" of 1,700 ringgits per picul (about $12,000 per ton).

The nid sense — approved a year The nld range — approved a year ago — was 1,200-1,500 ringgits per picul. The picul is a Chinese measure equivalent to 60.58 kilos (133 pounds) and is used far prices quoted in Malaysia. Output of Metals Said Off Sharply KINSASHA, Zaire, July 14 (AP-DJ) — Mining of copper and co-halt has resumed in Zaire's war-torn Shaba Province but at lower production rates than in the past.

In Zaire's Shaba

The Zairian government, which runs the mines, concedes only that production currently lags below last year's annual rate of 480,000 tons of copper and 15,000 tons of cobalt. But copper industry analysts say that current production is anywhere from 50-to-80 percent below capacity.

The mines were closed for more BERN, July 14 (AP-DJ) - Swiss than a month earlier this year after rebel forces invaded the area and drove out most of the European technicians and local residents. Belgian experts say it will take much of this month to analyze the figures from Kolwezi to determine actual production rates and learn how much is being shipped from were closed Friday due to a holiday.

FOR A RETURN ON TIME INVESTED.

critic Hugh Kenner observed in a study of James Joyce called "Dublin's Joyce" that Sherlock "Holmes' parents, it is clear, were the male and female halves of Sir Arbur Coron Dublin's division of Watson's the male and female halves of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's divided 19th-century mind." Nearly two decades later, in 1974, the noted trivialist Samuel Rosenberg concluded in his overstimulating study, "Naked is the Best Disguise," that Holmes really stood for Conan Doyle's superego, whose function it was to wage war against the author's forbidden sexual fantasies. And later the same year, one Nicholas Meyer produced evidence, in the form of a hitherto undiscovcodicil providing "for a box of pa-pers to be left oo deposit with his bankers for a period of oot less than fifty years, at the end of which than fifty years, at the end of which time it was to be opened and the contents made public."

And later the same year, one Nicholas Meyer produced evidence, in the form of a hitherto undiscovered Holmes adventure, called "The Seven-Per-Cent Solution" that the great detective was driven to cocaine addiction by the repressed borror of witnessing as a child the murder of one of his parents by the other.

My point is simply that poor Holmes bas been driven into deeper and deeper water since he last smiled tolerantly at Dr. Watson in "The Adventure of the Retired Colourman." And those depths have proved dismaying, to say the least, to those of us who still like to think of Holmes as a simple and burnane genius.

Disputed Racket Is Ruled Illegal STOCKHOLM, July 14 (AP) -

The International Tennis Federation has effectively outlawed the controversial double-strung "spaghetti rackets" for at least a year by adopting a rule that for the first time technically defines the racket.

There are no restrictions on size and shape of the frame, and all sin-gle strung rackets conform to the new standard. But rackets that give players an unfair advantage in ball spin were ruled out. After some sensational upsets, the double-strung rackets were fro-zen by the federation last October. "We do not want the basis of competitive tennis changed," the federation's president, Derek Hardwick, said at a meeting here. On the question of South Afri-

PARIS (IHT) — Then as now there were plans to change Paris, but then they used their heads. Then was four centuries ago and the project was a bridge to connect the royal palace of the Louvre with the new aristocratic section of the Left Bank. The building proposal for the new structure was only 131-pag-es long and while the project, interrupted hy labor problems and civil war, took 28 years, the re-sult was well worth it: the Pont-Neuf, today the oldest hridge in

There already were hridges connecting the Right and Left Banks of the Seine with the Ile de la Cite, the historic heart of Paris and home of the ancient Parisii tribe. But these bridges were ramshackle, unworthy and occasionally dangerous, and none had the very French comhination of rigor and glamour of the new bridge.

Eveo today, some might flod the Poot Alexandre III more reminisceot of Gay Paree or they may quote Apollinaire oo the Pont Mirabeau, but no Paris hridge has the nobility and sweep of the Pont-Neuf with its generous arches (seven on one half, five oo the other) and its powerful pilings cut to resemble the sharp edge of a ship's prow.

400th Birthday

The Pont-Neuf's 400th hirthdoy is being celebrated this summer with a small, selective and very good exhibition of paioting, engravings and photographs. A few weeks ago the City of Paris ed pickpockets, jugglers, knife-grinders, tooth-pullers, extermialso organized a sort of Pont-Neuf party, a slighty soggy at-tempt to recall the animation of nators, recruiting officers, pancake makers, pamphleteers (subversive pamphlets were known as pant-neufs), satirists such as Tabarin and Mondor, and duelists. There were sellers of herbal teas, water, flowers,

Countless Projects

Depending upon the political regime and the artistic trends of the time, countless projects were submitted over the centuries to "improve" the Pont-Neul and the Place Dauphine, Someone oamed Dupin suggested to Louis XIV that the statue of Henri IV be surrounded by other great fig-ures in Freoch history, starting with Joan of Arc. U.S. Narcotics Dealer PEOPLE: Bought a Fake Funeral

N.J., has lost his license and been given seven days to close his funeral home after he admitted accepting $5,000 to fake a funeral for a narcotics dealer who wanted a new identity. Emmett Lewis, who cremated the remains of an 80-yearold indigent woman and pretended that they were those of Clyde Hardy Jr., also faces sentencing to up to seven years in jail and a $2,000 fine July 21 on criminal charges of filing a phony death certificate. The state Board of Mortuary Science has declared that Lewis' action was unprofessional, unethical, fraudulent and deceitful. A complaint before the board stated that Hardy and Phyllis Scott, who posed as his wife, Bertha, offered Lewis the $5,000 to stage the fake funeral in November, 1976. She signed an order authorizing the cremation of Hardy's body at the Roschill Crematory in Linden, N.J., the complaint said. Lewis' autorney. John C. Love told the board that Lewis had known Hardy for a oumber of years, that he had no knowledge of Hardy's alleged dealings with narcoucs, and that Hardy had told Lewis he wanted to get a used-car lot hut because of a past court record, he was having difficulty doing so and therefore needed a new identity.
